The smile does not deny satisfaction. The musician from Ceará Ricardo Bacelar is opening the doors of his studio jasmin and presenting each space with pride. He comments on every detail, explains graphics, talks about the technical part, presents the instruments, from the common to the most exotic, strums one and the other, and details Dolby Atmos, sound technology that allows an immersive experience similar to that of the cinemas. "It's my Disney", excitedly defines the space where he has been producing records and singles.

It was in this studio that "Paracosmos" (2021) was born, an album that Ricardo shares with violinist Caíã Cavalcante, and "De Passage" (2022), a single with Toninho Horta. The latest project of this musical amusement park is "Congenital", sixth title of a discography which started in 2001 with "In Natura". It wasn't enough to have been produced at home, as a "test drive" of the personal studio, the album has as a special point the fact that it brings his official debut as a singer.

Since the days of the band Hanoi-Hanoi, of which he was a part in the 1990s, Bacelar has been doing vocals and, eventually, singing a solo. But it was on "Sebastiana", a 2018 album, that he really released his voice on the track "Oh mana let me go". Afterwards, he sang here and there, and he enjoyed it. He took classes with singer, teacher and conductor Aparecida Silvino understood this instrument more and decided to record an album where he works as a singer, producer and still plays all the instruments.

However, that's not why "Congenital" is a work done 100% with their own hands. By his side, Ricardo had Melk, sound technician who embarked on the journey of figuring out how to get the best sound for each invention that came along. For the album, they were testing mics, putting on and taking off instruments, dubbing recordings, comparing textures and learning how to use the studio. still learned how to play cuica and ride a berimbau. All through Youtube.

To assemble the repertoire, Bacelar also had suggestions from family and friends, and listened to a lot of music until he chose what fit in your voice and in your speech. "In this job, I I got more involved with the lyrics. Some songs were left out of the album because I didn't identify with the lyrics", he says, who was impressed by the simplicity and richness of "Estrela", by Gilberto Gil. "It's a genius thing", he evaluates, trying to find a word to define. In addition to this, the album features Caetano Veloso, Dori Caymmi, Jorge Mautner and others.

Each track of "Congenital" brings a memory to the musician. The one that names the album, for example, is by Lutz Melody, with whom he worked on an album by guitarist Renato Piau. "She walks this Earth (Sovereign Rosa)" is by Ivan Lins, a friend he made during copyright meetings and discussions. "Lies" is from Adriana Calcanhotto, which he accompanied in the recording of a duet with Erasmo Carlos. And there's "Parallels", from secondhandcomposer for whom he produced the album "Vício Elegante".

About the subject

By the way, this work by the author of "Hallucination" has many similarities with "Congenital". In addition to being a performer album, he sought a contemporary sound for the tracks mixing acoustic and electric elements. Even wanting to play with the reinterpretations, the artist sought to maintain the original intention of the tracks. For example, your version for "Snake Lick" (Djavan) it was born as a bossa nova, but he retreated to give the track back its brash, northeastern elements. "Aparecida gave the touch for me to put a tone up, to be louder. It's a mark of her, from the corner of Djavan".

Fact is that the song came for good for him. "It was great to be accompanied because I needed to learn about diction, breathing. And you have to practice. Every record you make, you sing differently. I'm now making an album with (singer, songwriter and pianist from Rio de Janeiro) delia Fischer and I'm already singing differently", evaluates Ricardo Bacelar, who wants to finish the projects he started in the studio in order to think about shows. The proposal is to mix the new repertoire with what was recorded on his instrumental albums. "The singing came and arrived. I can make records singing and not singing. I opened a door and I don't like being labeled. The industry likes that, saying 'that guy is a jazz pianist.' But I have a diverse background and I allow myself to record whatever I want. I just make the music I like."
